

October 16, 2025: On Donald Trump Having 'Sadistic Personality Disorder'

I am documenting for the world to view that Donald Trump is exhibiting an obsessive compulsive need to cause harmful terrorism against our home.

I am testifying publicly that there is a 'maniacal' obsession by this ongoing spying into my live to cause me fear, anxiety, and agitations.

I am testifying publicly that the same forces that were being used to 'draw me into' the Republican Party are now being used to obsessively threaten harmful and illegal actions against our life. I am not exaggerating when I describe these messages as 'maniacally obsessive' in their frequency, direction, and intention.

I am publicly accusing Donald Trump of having a serious mental health problem that is causing him to obsessively spy on and threaten our home. I am not a mental health professional, but the syndrome is defined by a search engine as 'Sadistic Personality Disorder' - meaning that the person has an obsessive compulsion with causing harm to others and that they are also taking pleasure in this compulsion to cause harm.

◆ AI Overview

A personality disorder is the most likely diagnosis, specifically Sadistic Personality Disorder (SPD), which involves taking pleasure in causing terror and pain in others. Unlike OCD, where a person might have intrusive violent thoughts but is distressed by them, SPD is characterized by a genuine, often compulsive enjoyment of cruelty and causing fear. ⓘ

Sadistic Personality Disorder (SPD)

- Key characteristics: A pattern of cruel, demeaning, or aggressive behavior, with a specific enjoyment of witnessing the psychological or physical pain of others.
- Behaviors: An individual with SPD may use intimidation to control others, and may be fascinated with violence, torture, or weapons. They may act in unusually harsh ways toward those under their control. ⓘ

How this differs from Harm OCD

- Harm OCD: In this subtype of OCD, individuals have intrusive, unwanted, and distressing thoughts of harming others, but they are terrified of these thoughts and feel immense anxiety about them. They are not taking pleasure in the idea of causing harm. ⓘ
- Compulsions: The behaviors in OCD, including harm OCD, are compulsions performed to relieve anxiety, not because the person enjoys the act itself. ⓘ
- Enjoyment: The crucial difference is the presence of pleasure. If someone is getting a compulsive, obsessive pleasure from causing terror, it points toward a personality disorder like SPD, not OCD. ⓘ

I had originally written his diagnosis as being 'Harm OCD' however after further review, it appears that 'Harm OCD' is the experience of having unwanted compulsive thoughts to cause harm to others. The key difference between 'Harm OCD' and 'Sadistic Personality Disorder' is that the patient, in this case being Donald Trump, is suffering 'Sadistic Personality Disorder' because he is getting a 'compulsive, obsessive pleasure from causing terror.'

I am absolutely the ongoing victim of Donald Trump's constant thoughts of causing harm to people and he is directing those thoughts into our home through ongoing visual depictions and acoustic bombardments that accompany my daily home life.

I am trying to live peacefully in my home, and this man is acting as a maniacal DJ playing a video mix of threats into my vision and my hearing at all times - all times. Every single moment of my waking life is now being consumed by Donald Trump's obsessive need to cause me to 'bow' to his threatening way.

The old man has officially lost his grip on reality. I am alerting the community that Donald Trump is expressing to me a mental health disorder that I can best define as 'Sadistic Personality Disorder.'

I am also attaching the notes on 'Harm OCD' or 'Harm Obsessive Compulsive Disorder' to show the difference between the two and to document how I am drawing this conclusion.

◆ AI Overview

A mental health problem that causes an obsessive and compulsive need to cause terror is harm OCD, a subtype of Obsessive-Compulsive Disorder (OCD) where the intrusive thoughts are about causing harm to others. Individuals with harm OCD are horrified by these thoughts and often engage in compulsive behaviors to prevent the feared actions, such as hiding sharp objects, constantly checking on loved ones, or avoiding certain situations. ⓘ

Characteristics of harm OCD

- Obsessions: The person experiences intrusive, unwanted, and distressing thoughts, images, or urges related to causing harm to others. ⓘ
- Compulsions: In response to the anxiety from the obsessions, the person engages in repetitive behaviors or mental acts to prevent harm or reduce distress. ⓘ
- Internal conflict: Unlike individuals who find pleasure in hurting others, those with harm OCD are deeply disturbed by their thoughts and do not want to cause harm. ⓘ
- Examples of compulsions: These can include hiding knives, avoiding news about violence, constantly reassuring themselves they won't harm anyone, or mentally reviewing their actions for any potential harm. ⓘ

Important distinction

- It is crucial to distinguish harm OCD from actual violent intent. ⓘ
- People with harm OCD are not at a higher risk of carrying out the thoughts; their distress is rooted in their fear of doing so. ⓘ
- The thoughts are irrational and do not reflect the person's true desires or values. ⓘ
